The book's own words

A bloated carcass of a dog lay lolled on bladderwrack. Before him the gunwale of a boat, sunk in sand. _Un coche ensablé_ Louis Veuillot called Gautier's prose. These heavy sands are language tide and wind have silted here. And these, the stoneheaps of dead builders, a warren of weasel rats. Hide gold there. Try it. You have some. Sands and stones. Heavy of the past. Sir Lout's toys. Mind you don't get one bang on the ear. I'm the bloody well gigant rolls all them bloody well boulders, bones for my steppingstones. Feefawfum. I zmelz de bloodz odz an Iridzman.

A point, live dog, grew into sight running across the sweep of sand. Lord, is he going to attack me? Respect his liberty. You will not be master of others or their slave. I have my stick. Sit tight. From farther away, walking shoreward across from the crested tide, figures, two. The two maries. They have tucked it safe mong the bulrushes. Peekaboo. I see you. No, the dog. He is running back to them. Who?

why these lines: the dog's carcass on the bladderwrack, and the live dog crossing the sand — the choice is the project's (A5)

The warrant is the reader's own words at p.6 of the reading record: “The beach scene is awesome.”. It names this episode as “The beach scene”. It names the episode and nothing narrower, so the scene is the project's choice as well as the lines.

this episode's question count is zero, and the study says why in its own words: The early book is undercounted: episodes 1–3 were partly read before the companion became a habit, and the single retrospective question covering episodes 2–3 (pdf 6) was left out of episode counts under the conservative-assignment rule — their zeros are an artifact of method plus timing, not proven ease.
